

Seeing Is Believing

No other screen in the world compares to The Wall.

What does the term “luxury” mean to you? A state of great comfort or elegance? The cost of a high value item? For many, it simply equates to freedom of choice, which is why technology specialist Bond has partnered with electronics giant Samsung to present the Luxury Living Lounge, showcasing The Wall.

The Wall reinvents digital interaction as we know it and eliminates the need to choose. Bespoke by design, the direct drive LED screen is built on site, therefore removing all problems associated with large screen installation. It’s presented in 146-inch format in the Luxury Living Lounge but can be built up to a screen size of 292 inches. Delivering vibrant superior colour quality and unrivalled depth of picture it contains complex video processing software that makes viewing fast-moving sports, such as Grand Prix racing and MotoGP, exceptional.

There can be no better place, then, for the appointment-only Luxury Living Lounge than the Principality of Monaco, set against a backdrop of Port Hercules and the Monte Carlo Grand Prix race circuit. It is also an apt location for Bond, a leading AV/IT and security expert that seeks out and specifies high-end technology for the world’s largest superyachts and private residences.

“The Wall is a very impressive piece of technology from Samsung that can be seen in Monaco,” says mayor Georges Marsan. “Being the only private viewing space in the world to see this technology, I am very pleased that Bond has brought it to the Principality.”

Bond Technology Management (TM) was founded 14 years ago by Australian-born electronics engineer, Will Faimatea, after accruing a wealth of first-hand knowledge and experience working on board multiple superyachts. The company has been intrinsic in the selection and installation of AV/IT, communications and security systems on yachts of up to 180 meters in length and providing UHNWI assets guidance, support and quality representation.

Will Faimatea also works closely as a managing partner of VFA Solutions Air, Land and Sea to deliver air purification system that effectively eliminates viruses, allergens and fine dust in an effective and efficient way. When properly installed on board of yachts and in land-based residences, the patented air purification system is the one in operation today that safely and effectively eliminates viruses, allergens and fine dust providing clean air for all to breathe; a luxury no longer taken for granted in the wake of Covid-19.

Commenting on Bond’s evolution, Martin Redmayne, Chairman of The Superyacht Group, says: “Over the years, Bond TM has evolved from a boutique specialist consultancy into one of the superyacht industry’s benchmark businesses.”

Bond’s global services are made all the more effective by its 24-hour support line and its network of offices located in Monaco, Hamburg, Amsterdam, Barcelona, Boston, Palma, Cyprus and Brisbane.
